

GREAT HOLY DAY FOR JEWISH FOLK BEGINS AT SUNSET

Yom Kippur, the Day of Expiation, Observed
Most Solemnly by Hebrews the World
Over—Business Entirely Suspended and All Attend Worship.

Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement, begins at sunset to-night. All over the world the solemn ceremonies of this great fast of the Jewish race will be observed as it has been observed since it was enjoined, as recorded in Leviticus xxiv, 23:

"On the tenth day of the seventh month (Tishri) there shall be a day of atonement; it shall be a holy convocation unto you; and ye shall afflict your souls, and offer an offering of fire unto the Lord."

The full title of this holiday is Yom ha-Kippurim (Day of Expiation), spoken of in the Talmud as the "Great Day," but the name it is commonly known by is Yom Kippur. It is, without doubt, the most carefully observed day in the Jewish calendar. It being the only fast day ordained by the Bible. The other fast days have been observed in commemoration of solemn events in the history of the Jewish race.

All Go to Worship.

From sundown to-night, until sundown Wednesday night the great east side, where dwells the great Jewish population, will be still, save for the voices of the chazan, or reader, and the hushed voices of the congregations responding to the reading of the sacred service. All business will be suspended. All sounds of cooking and household silence. In east side synagogues and up-town synagogues the Jewish peoples of all shades of belief will lay aside all other things for fasting and prayer.

All persons above the age of thirteen are expected to observe the fast from sundown to sundown. Only the young children, the sick, nursing mothers and the aged who might not be able to endure going without food are exempted from the injunction of fasting. And at that few sick or aged allow physical needs to cause them to break the Scriptural law. It is observed by all.

Work will cease sooner than usual this afternoon in orthodox Jewish business places and the women will be busy until supper time preparing food for to-night's feast by which the faithful are fortified against the fast and for the feast which begins upon the appearance of three stars in the heavens. The afternoon service or Mincha, when the Book of Isaiah is read, is the service of the day. The Book of Isaiah is read, the service of the day. The Book of Isaiah is read, the service of the day.

The services of the day are concluded by Neilah, at the end of which the whole congregation impressively proclaims the unity of God, and the shofar, a ram's horn, is blown for one long blast, and a brief evening service called Kaddish follows the worshippers from the fast.

At Peace with Fellowmen.
Fully two hours before sunset to-night the synagogues will begin filling with worshippers until each church is filled to capacity, the devout and regular attendants sitting beside those who seldom come on any day but Yom Kippur. The worshippers are dressed for prayer, many of the elder men having

In addition to their silk prayer shawls or tallithah and white skull caps their kilted or white linen death shrouds, worn beneath the prayer shawls. They also remove their shoes, standing in stocking feet or in slippers of cloth or imitation leather.

From the galleries the voices of the women in lamentation recite their prayers. The chazan, who reads the service and chants the ritual, is also in a prayer shawl, under which he wears a white garment. When the service is over, the chazan removes the prayer shawl, and the women replace the everyday colored velvet curtains which surround the ark containing the holy scrolls of the law.

The preliminary to obtaining Divine pardon is seeking peace with one's fellow man, and many reconciliations are effected, many pardons sought on the eve of Yom Kippur. If a man has offended another who has since died, the living offender takes ten witnesses to make this confession: "I have sinned against Israel and against this deceased person."

Solemn Evening Service.
By canonical regulation the orthodox commemorate by visits to the graves of their dead and by offering prayers for the souls of the dead in the presence of the congregation, using this memorial collection: "May God remember the soul of my respected father, who has gone to his eternal home, on whose behalf I pray, 'I am alive'."

The evening service is celebrated by the singing of the sad and beautiful Kol Nidre, a classic composition, heavy with its sadness as sung in the traditional key. Three times the chazan and his choir sing with increasing loudness, the congregation repeating softly:

"All vows, remissions, prohibitions and obligations of every kind, which have been sworn and imposed upon us from the Day of Atonement to the next, we now repeat of and postpone them to the day of atonement. Our vows are no vows; our oaths are no oaths." This merely applies to the vows which the weaker kind of men make and not those which bind him to others.

Reading the Scrolls.
The worship thus begun, the synagogue remains open until the conclusion of the fast. At 6 o'clock to-morrow morning the scrolls which were removed from the ark and are now placed in the synagogue, are read. The Book of Leviticus xvi, read, following this is the reading of the Haftarah, from Isaiah, a service called Musaph, including a service called Abodah, a repetition of the services of the high priest of the temple of Jerusalem on the day of Atonement.

The afternoon service or Mincha, when the Book of Isaiah is read, is the service of the day. The Book of Isaiah is read, the service of the day. The Book of Isaiah is read, the service of the day.

The services of the day are concluded by Neilah, at the end of which the whole congregation impressively proclaims the unity of God, and the shofar, a ram's horn, is blown for one long blast, and a brief evening service called Kaddish follows the worshippers from the fast.

At Peace with Fellowmen.

President Small, of the national organization of telegraphers, has returned from Washington, where he had a conference with Samuel Gompers and other members of the American Federation of Labor, relative to the issuing of a general appeal to labor organizations for financial support to the strikers.

Mr. Small believes that with adequate support, the strikers will be able to hold out for three months longer, by which time, he thinks, the telegraph companies will be compelled to consent to arbitration. The appeal will be issued to-day.

Joseph L. Abrams, President of the local union of telegraphers, said: "The telegraph companies advertised extensively throughout the country, yesterday and Sunday that there would be a strike among the striking telegraphers in New York this morning. I do not find that single telegrapher returned to work. Our men and women realize that this is a fight to a finish."

A sudden pull at the wrong elevator cable in the Nassau Building, at No. 140 Nassau street, yesterday afternoon, cost Cornelius Nelson his life. He was an elevator repairer and lived in Elmhurst, L. I.

Nelson was crushed between the side of the elevator well and the car. He was carried to the first floor, before the elevator stuck and was removed by fellow workmen while still breathing. Nelson died before an ambulance arrived. He leaves a wife and family.

SPECIAL NOTICE

O'Neill-Adams Co. Guarantee.

THE BOND THAT MAKES IT IMPOSSIBLE FOR YOU TO LOSE WHEN TRADING HERE.

WE GUARANTEE the price of every article we sell to be as low as if not lower than the price of the same quality of goods at any other retail store in New York.

WE ALSO GUARANTEE the style, value, condition and wear of every article to be exactly as represented, either in our store or in our advertisements.

WE STILL FURTHER GUARANTEE every purchase to be a satisfactory transaction to the purchaser, as we do not consider the sale complete until our patron is fully pleased.

IF AFTER BUYING you believe that any part of either the letter or the spirit of this Guarantee has been violated, call on us immediately to rectify the error; or if for any just reason whatsoever you conclude you would rather have the cash than the goods, then return the merchandise to us in the same condition as when purchased, and we will refund your money promptly and cheerfully.

It is, of course, understood that auxiliary goods and goods made or cut to order cannot be exchanged or credited and that the prices on contract goods are not subject to reduction.

Sterling Music Roll Circulating Library

A Piano Player or Playerpiano without an accessible Music Roll Circulating Library is like a luxurious carriage without any horses.

Years have been spent in organizing and perfecting the Sterling Music Roll Circulating Library and to-day it is one of the most complete and extensive in the world.

The cost of joining the Library is a nominal one, for which you have the privilege of using a certain number of rolls of music, of your own selection, and the right to exchange the rolls as often as you wish. The privilege of this Library is one of the unquestionable advantages gained by purchasing a Sterling Playerpiano. Competent demonstrators always ready and willing to try music for you and assist you in making selections.
